About me

I have studied Sustainable Development and Business Administration and I would like to create a new initiative based on Rural Sustainable Development. This initiative combines different sectors and intends to be developed as an educational organization for all of them. As working space, farming, new open technologies, fabrication laboratory, and community kitchen combined together, making a new Co-operative idea. We face diversity as the main advantage, and different stages need to be developed. This stages are strategically planned to conclude the project gradually in an effective way. As a result, all different fields involved should be blending to a homogenous initiative.

The idea is growing as a co-op based on Sustainable Rural Development in combination with different fields that promote agriculture and sustainable development. Such as cultural sustainable tourism, fabrication laboratories and environmental educational programs.

What I expect from host organisation

I would like to visit a co-op where different sectors are already combined in order to understand the decision making and developing activities through the years. The most important collaboration I mainly want to visit is the combination of agricultural development through technology, coming from fabrication laboratories and open source technologies. The ideal host organisation would be part of relevant European networks and introduce me to similar initiatives around Europe.
